I have no issue with banning one shooter, or two, or a whole platoon. But to try to come up with a formula that you can slap on an entire unit to influence combat, is to attempt to take a black and white approach to a thing that is a largely nuanced concept. That said, if you guys are going to start looking at the facts on line to fine tune the talent system, then you need to understand that the circumstances in which players perform is going to be varied. The same goes for the motivations that drive the motivations of players. And the weather, the temperature, the morale of the men, their training, the size of the target, the unit composition of the defender, and a host of other variables. So no, I'm not going
