What's New in the Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.5.1)?

Q: Why doesn't join work for two aliases? select c.id, c.comment from (select id, comment, count() as element_count from comments group by id, comment having count() > 1) as c join (select cid, count() as comments_in_user from comments group by cid having count() > 1) as d on c.id = d.cid; gives the error: ERROR: forcannot join, since the FROM clause already contains the join's. A: I'm answering my own question: The reason it doesn't work is explained here. In short, alias c has already been used in the SQL fragment enclosed by the from clause. This can be seen from the error message: forcannot join... already contains the join's. I tried it with a simple subquery and it worked. From this I conclude that the error message is not completely correct. As @MitchMaier pointed out, SQL Server does not allow multiple joins in a single query. So I think the correct error message should be: ERROR: MULTIPLE joins are not allowed A: From the documentation: A table that is the outermost result set of an SQL statement cannot also be an innermost result set, unless it is in an INNER JOIN or JOINs with WHERE conditions that take it out of the join of the subquery. The subquery is part of the FROM clause, and it is called for every row in the main query, so it can't be part of another FROM clause. A: As @bacco pointed out, the error message is only partially correct. The error has two parts, and they are not interchangeable. ERROR: forcannot join, since the FROM clause already contains the join's.
