Q: Accessing custom settings from custom Task I have successfully created and extended a Custom Task with a Custom Settings object. When I run the script from an OnWorkflowActivated event handler, the My.Settings object correctly shows the stored value (default). However, when I run the task from a method in a custom task control, the My.Settings object always returns 0. Can anyone explain how to make this work? For example: Task "MyCustomTask" implements OnTaskStarted and OnTaskCompleted events. My settings file is My.Settings with name MySettings and value "1". Stored settings correctly in task settings control. MyMethod() in Task Control correctly returns 1 when running in OnWorkflowActivated event handler. MyMethod() in Task Control always returns 0 when running in Task. A: That's because you don't have a settings object for your Task Control when you are executing your task. It will create one with the default settings based on the execution environment.
