Q: Dynamic Collision Detection I'm working on a 3D game, and am currently working on the collision detection. I have a physics class that is a simplified version of this: The problem with this method is that the contact point is fixed, and does not account for rotation. As soon as I add rotation into the collision detection, it doesn't work for the player. I'm new to 3D and C++, but I'm not stupid. I just can't think of an efficient way to account for rotation. Help? (edit: I am using the Physica Library.) A: Try this wikipedia article it will help you #include #include #include #include using namespace std; class shape{ private: int mass
