Part 1/5 of the Chronicles The first part of the Chronicles is made up of twelve chapters. The first six chapters recount the life of Moses before the Exodus, and the remaining six chapters recount the Exodus from Egypt. The twelve chapters of the first half of the Chronicles (Chapters 11-18) record the life and ministries of the twelve spies and their report. The story of the spies does not begin until chapter 11, and the final report of the twelve spies does not occur until chapter 18. In fact, the accounts of the twelve spies do not occur in chronological order. The events recorded in chapters 11-18 occur years before the events recorded in chapters 19-32. The story of the spies and their report is not the only strange feature of the Chronicles. The entire narrative is dominated by the fact that God makes a covenant with the twelve spies after they have returned from their mission to Canaan. The spies are rewarded for faithfully serving Israel by receiving all the Land of Israel, plus parts of Transjordan that included the territory later called the Kingdom of Geshur, Aram and the eastern half of the Tribe of Simeon. The story of the spies is the central narrative theme of the entire book. The chronology of the book also introduces various puzzling shifts in narrative. These are among the most difficult of the many chronological shifts in the Bible. The chronology of the books of the Bible is a complex subject. For that reason, we will begin by looking briefly at the various chronologies of the books of the Bible, and then examine more closely the chronology of the book of Joshua.

The Chronicles Chronology in the Books of the Chronicles The books of the Chronicles all follow the same basic historical sequence. The first six books of the Chronicles record the life of Moses before the Exodus, and the last six books record the history of the Exodus, the conquest of the Land of Israel and the settlement of the nation of Israel in the land. The chronological sequence in the books of the Chronicles is as follows: This sequence has long been accepted by

What's New In?

Imagine walking into a brand new apartment with modern furniture, sleek bedding, and a home decor that expresses your personality. Your apartment is one of the most important places in your life because it is the first thing you see when you step inside. You have spent months searching for this apartment, so the last thing you want is for it to not be something you will love. But that's what often happens when renters leave the keys and walk out. Apartment searching has become a nightmare. When you walk into a new apartment, you want to know that your new space will feel like a home. Your living space should be aesthetically pleasing as well as clean, but a lack of organization can also make an otherwise clean space unbearable to live in. No matter how hard you tried, it's difficult to do it all – and budgeting your time and money appropriately is an important aspect of apartment ownership. Here are some common mistakes that people make when searching for an apartment: Mistake #1: Look at apartment websites but don't actually walk through the building to see the spaces The same thing that's great about apartment hunting online is that you can be pretty confident in your search. This means that you're getting the best deal on the market, and you have a lot less chance of ending up in an apartment that you hate. The downside to this is that when you get to the building, you might not be ready. Let's face it – apartment tours are annoying. It's a pain for the landlord to open up the building for you and then go through all the details of what is available. You also often get the impression that the landlord is feeling more than a little bit pressured as to what you are going to do with the space you've been given. So, what do you do? You can go online and research the building. You can look at a lot of different pictures. But even with the various online apartment photos, you still don't actually know what the space is like inside. Perhaps, most apartment website will have some photos of the lobby. These photos are probably the ones that you will see when you walk up the building. That's just not always the case. For example, at a brand new building that I have seen, the lobby might just be a hall with a handful of doors. If this
