Pandemic Plan The Pandemic Plan is a framework for dealing with a potential influenza pandemic. It was first developed in 2009 by the Department of Health in the United Kingdom. The Plan was based on the Threat Assessment and Pandemic Influenza Plan, an earlier framework developed by the British Government. The framework emphasised three key principles: Evidence-based planning Focus on the preparation for a potential pandemic The Plan has been criticised for emphasising testing as a primary means of protection and infection control over vaccination, a major cause of disease and death during past pandemics.

motor fibres innervating the human temporomandibular joint: a combined anterograde and retrograde study. The topographic organization of the motor fibres innervating the human temporomandibular joint was studied in 4 adult cadavers using the anterograde and retrograde transport of horseradish peroxidase. In both cases, the labelled fibres were examined following perfusion of the muscles innervated by these fibres. The anterograde study revealed that the medial pterygoid and the lateral pterygoid muscles and the masseter muscle are innervated by the same nerve supply. All these muscles are innervated by the superior root of the facial nerve, while the lateral pterygoid is innervated by the inferior root of this nerve. Lateral and deep aspects of the temporal muscle are innervated by the mandibular division of the trigeminal nerve, while lateral and superficial aspects of the temporal muscle are innervated by the buccal (dental) branch of this nerve. The posterior retromandibular nerve is found to innervate the temporal muscle directly. The retrograde study showed that the masseter and lateral pterygoid muscles are innervated by a nerve branch from the spinal accessory nerve, while the superior rectus and medial pterygoid muscles are innervated by the ninth nerve. All these muscles are innervated by the medial root of the facial nerve, while the lateral pterygoid is innervated by the inferior root of this nerve.

The fourth nerve innervates the temporal muscle, directly, without the use of any root of this nerve. The lateral and deep aspects of the temporal muscle are innervated by the mandibular division of the trigeminal nerve, while the lateral and superficial aspects of the temporal muscle are innervated by the buccal (dental) branch of this nerve.
