The sheer lack of updates after almost 4 years is scaring away the casuals. This game has a great community, but it needs more playability. I have been playing this for over 10 years. First time I tried it a year ago. Wanted to get into multiplayer. The single player campaign is terrible. Even with a free version. You can't be a commander. At least they would have offered a Demo some time ago. Its always been just me and the random bots. If they would simply add a few updates every month there would be no problem with playing this game, because it is one of the few games that delivers a lot of fun. They should maybe add in more 3D mods/battles and scenarios. I played this game for over a year back in the day, and had a blast with it. Not sure why it died. It had a great community, and a lot of mods. It never really died, it just slowly lost players. Features: Key Features: Several Different Ending Sequences Four Difficulty Levels to Play on Over a dozen original songs Unique visual style reminiscent of Devil May Cry and Resident Evil Original soundtrack featuring music by Kenji Miyamoto (Final Fantasy VIII, Symphony of the Night)The Sum of a Word The Sum of a Word is the third album released by the Australian band Evermore. The album was released by Oz Records in Australia and PolyGram in the UK. The album was recorded at the Red House Studios in Melbourne, Australia and was produced by Tony Cohen and James Freudenheim. It was the last album that Evermore recorded on the Kaleidoscope label. The Sum of a Word was the first Evermore album to not contain a re-recording of one of their existing hits. The album gained a good reception in the Australian media. The album also received favourable reviews in the UK media. With its blend of rock and pop styles, it was a sign that Evermore were shifting from their previous incarnation as a rock band to being a pop group. The album was never released in the United States and the band would not return to the country until The Evermore Sessions Vol. 2. This was mainly due to the fact that the band members wanted to concentrate on the live recording of their next album. Track listing All tracks written by Stuart Hamm. "Happy Ever After" - 3:28
