This is the 4th annual entry in the long-running video game football series developed by EA Canada, and it promises to be the best yet. So, why is it so important that FIFA 22 uses human-based data?

It's what "fine-tuning" the game's physics engine really means, and that data could have a real impact on how you play. We'll get to that in a minute. This year's FIFA is an evolution of everything the series has done before. Every feature, from modes, to single-player, to gameplay, is improved. There's more in this year's FIFA than there has been in the previous 14 versions combined. FIFA is an evolving game and franchise. If you, like me, have been playing the game for the last two decades, and have played previous versions as my main game, it's likely going to be very different in FIFA 22. FIFA is mostly known for two things: firstly, it's football. Secondly, it is a big budget franchise. But it's not a clean break from what came before. The new version adds refinements and innovations and, for the first time, a stronger focus on realism. As developer David Rutter has always said, the game is about the players. The one thing that the game has struggled with in the past is getting "the player" to feel exactly like the real deal. With the new version of the game, FIFA is closer than ever to getting "the player" to feel like the real deal. The main event of FIFA 21 was the introduction of something called "Aim Assist," which allows players to control the behaviour of their players on the pitch. For example, he'll be able to choose players who are naturally a lot better at final pass for their team, or even chose players who are good at curling the ball, or have low shots on goal. This year, the new "FIFA 22" for Nintendo Switch contains all these modes, and more. However, FIFA 22 for Nintendo Switch also contains something else that most people probably didn't know about, and that is "HyperMotion Technology." What exactly is this? And why is it included in FIFA 22 on Nintendo Switch, but not in FIFA on other systems? I'll explain how it works, and why I think it's important to include it in the game

FIFA 22 for Xbox One drops players into the heart of the pitch for a truly immersive football experience. Take the reins of a football club and drive it to glory as you embark on a new adventure. Create the team of your dreams, gear them up and then take to the pitch to show what they can do. Settle into a new narrative mode, called "Moment to Moment"

What's new:

- FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
- Career Mode - Live out your dreams as both a manager and a player in FIFA 22. Create the newest club in FIFA, design your kits, style your stadium, and choose whether to compete with the elite or rise up from the lower divisions as you manage your club to glory. Or test your skills as a player, with a more immersive Player Career mode that gives you more ways to progress, achieve, and immerse yourself in your Pro's journey through the game.
- New Players 10 new rising stars, and 10 new legends who are returning from older FIFA titles. Many of the new additions have already made a name for themselves in previous iterations.
- Adaptive AI
 - Greater flexibility has been added to the game AI in

FIFA 22 to tune the way the computer-controlled players behave.

- As you control an over-the-top ball, the Premier League's Stoke City star can change direction intelligently and get behind opponents.
- You'll find players that are more adept at making runs from deep, staying ahead of play, and distributing the ball.
- Smart defenders are getting smarter. They no longer provide risky cover, because they don't provide a whole lot of cover in the first place.
