This would be a site that has all of the, i think. Imaging systems including nuclear imaging, Xray diffraction, X-ray fluorescence, and X-ray computed tomography. And any other systems that might be interesting to me. But if there is anything else i have completely forgotten about please tell me. A: There is no fool proof way to find the "right" sites for the "right" subject. Such a list would have to depend on lots of subjective criteria and include analysis of the site's content, frequency of updates, reputation and so on. Even specific words or variations in the URL would have to be taken into account. If you really want to try the "guessing game" type approach, have a quick scan of the Related tags, pages that link to the same topic, and maybe the tags from some of the recent questions with interesting answers. Then have a look at the top 5 highest rated questions and see which ones seem to gather up the most sites. But the "best" list is by no means a definitive one that would need to be applied to any arbitrary new StackExchange site. FILED NOT FOR PUBLICATION JAN 21 2010 MOLLY C. Moldova used to be part of the Soviet Union until 1991. It's Eastern neighbor, Ukraine, and the United States have yet to recognize the independence of this republic. Moldova is dominated by ethnic Russians with a majority of people in the east looking to Russia. The capital has a large number of museums, and I expected to find a lot of anti-war and pro-Western and liberal views. I was wrong. There is no way to describe it any other than this -- "a museum of genocide". It's one room, the museum, and it displays what happened under the communist dictatorships of the 1950s-70s. It's a museum of people who were rounded up by police into cattle wagons, beaten and humiliated. It's a museum of people that were tortured, starved to death, or exterminated by bullets. The people that lived in these prisons were never heard from again. The museum is small, and not very exciting, but it's mesmerizing. Everyone from the museum staff to the tour guide were very polite and made sure to give permission before photos were taken. I liked seeing how people would react to what happened to them. I had expected extreme reverence, but often the reaction was disbelief. The museum starts out with the names and the faces of the people who were imprisoned, and then goes into the prisons themselves. 0cc13bf012
