Have you noticed that all of the humongous hits on this planet are done in the form of youtube videos of people playing video games?

I have personally seen over 10,000,000 unique visits over a 2 week period from videos (even though it seems like it's not as good looking and it's a bit cheesy) of people playing a game.

I was wondering how we can take this formula and apply it to the embedded

What's new in Holy Knight Luviria:

- Who Will Win? Until today's update I was heavily into The Last Guardian, but the fates of Lilina and Deva took a front-row seat as I've returned to Mortal Kombat 11 - the first game since the lengthy (mostly) in-game day one patch that goes until March of next year. As a result, I haven't played much of anything lately, so it was a welcome surprise to see not just one but two solid entries into the wondrous world of video game DLC this week. Even better, both games are genuinely solid titles in their own right - which makes the announcement-fest that I'm about to endure all the more entertaining, in a fairly perverse sort of way. Bloodstained: Dark Curse is due for release later this week on Steam, and with it comes a whopping 30 minutes of additional gameplay footage. So, that plus Dragon Quest VII to which it's linked, makes the announcement of PBR's release extra-celebratory. And, speaking of Bloodstained, reclusive despot Oliver Mainwood has also revealed an upcoming April Fool's joke in the form of a brand new "Overwatch-meets-Monster Hunter" online battle royale game. Let's all bask in this moment of glorious New Year's news! First up, however, is Sakura Wars: So Long, My Love! Everything I've seen and felt about the game since it was originally announced back in 2017 firmly leads me to believe that this one will be a neat trip back, no matter whether it's just on the PlayStation 4 or from the comfort of your own couch. Isn't that what makes these announcements fun to see? It's finally happening! Originally announced way back in 2008, the anime's sixth season will land in Japan on October 3. Its release date on disc and in digital form should be announced within the following month. It will come with two new OVA episodes, and if that's not your thing, you can purchase the season one home video collection for 2,560 yen (~$23). While the game's presence sounds practically confirmed, it is worth noting that it was listed as "coming soon" on its Japanese home page back in February. As for the reason, perhaps Square-Enix was waiting for the right time to announce it? Or maybe there's even more than meets the eye here. It's been a while since we've had any definitive news on the subject - well, besides the fact that
