StrategyRPG/Card Game hybrid set in a wondrous fantasy realm. Players take on the role of Wizard

Students, traveling adventurers that must navigate a series of obstacles to earn the magical Scroll which allows them to access powerful and useful Scrolls. Try not to lose, because it's pretty hard to keep going without a Scroll... and if you do, your adventure is over. Key Features: Open RPG system adapted from Pathfinder: Dynamic Card Game elements: Classic, Beautiful, and Fun Fantasy Art: Riding The hybrid nature of the game isn't just visually striking, it's also strategic. So much of the game revolves around cards as your opponents are giving them to you, so the quality and quantity of these cards is paramount to winning! Looking to go mobile? The app version of the game, released this fall, offers exactly the same great gameplay you can only get in the web version.

Chirality-Dependent Hydrophobicity in Highly Oriented Pyrene-Porphyrin Films. The hydrophobic behavior of a pyrene-based probe with two different chiral centers has been investigated by means of synchrotron radiation circular dichroism (SRCD) spectroscopy and contact angle measurement. It is found that the orientation of pyrene chromophore has no effect on the absorption spectrum of the pyrene-porphyrin complex but slightly changes the water contact angle on the film surface. The computational analysis of molecular dynamics (MD) simulation data of pyrene-porphyrin complexes indicates that the orientation of the chromophore is locked by the molecular environment of the porphyrin moiety and the pyrene unit. Thus, the experimental hydrophobicity of films with molecular orientation cannot be explained only on the basis of the orientation of pyrene. Moreover, the dependence of the contact angle on the pyrene chirality has been found.

Activation of nuclear factor kappaB is transiently induced in a fashion similar to that observed in steroid-resistant fibroblasts following chronic administration of prednisolone. Antiinflammatory glucocorticoids bind to a cytosolic receptor which subsequently translocates to the nucleus. In most systems studied, this translocation is both steroid-dependent and sustained

What's new:

series (or Lake Drunk series?) by Andrew Hugh Bevin. What's the difference? Gummie Bears. #1 ~ Gummie Bears ~ Lake Drunk

One night Ramon watched an old woman from his office travelling up the street at the same time he was. She had skin the same color as the moon even in daytime. The sun never cut so much as a sliver, never blistered so much as a wound. Amelia, Ramon's office assistant, sipped a drink on the way up the hallway. In the three months she had worked for Ramon Medina she didn't know any more than what he told her. She was waiting for him to take off his clothes. He was probably going to see a movie or something. She hated him, but for how long could she hate him? The office was in a five story building. She didn't know what he used to do before he was married, but she knew he was in politics. Or maybe it was the other way around. He was Puerto Rican, the oldest ashy-skinned Puerto Rican she had ever seen. When he came up the five flights of stairs towards her she spotted him and drank the remainder of her water. "Make like your waiting for a bus Ramon, and I'll work up a thirst," she told him. Then the old woman show up and he ran away. What a coward, you could practically see his cowardly eyes. He should have ran before the old woman saw him with a woman. He was there, underneath his beautiful, gruff exterior, and something died inside of him. He had to tell the old woman that he was going home and run and make sure no one saw. He walked down the city streets, away from the river to the airport. There was a little strip club just before he hit the highway. He opened the door to the strip club and the girls welcomed him through the bar and parlor. The whole club was eye level of a person. "Hey, Ramon." One of the girls said, and he replied, "Hi, I'm Ramon, wanna go for a ride?" After they got into the truck, Ramon pulled two guns out of his lap and told the girls not to say anything. After one of the girls asked "What do you mean?" The girl pointing at a song blaring from the radio, Ramon said, "Don't ask anymore bitch,

Categories DO YOU GUYS THINK I WOULD BE GOOD AT BUYING STUFF?? I'm looking for people in my area who do buys and sell stuff, I don't have any pics but the stuff isn't to big in size either, which means I can fit it into my car. All the stuff is old and was either forgotten or thrown out. Do you guys think I would be good at buying and selling stuff? If so pm me, I'll get back to you within the next 2-5 days.

The average American woman spends $400 a year on makeup, according to a survey released this week by consumer research firm NPD Group. That's a figure that spans many types of purchases, but makeup tops the list, suggesting that women are spending more on appearance-enhancing products than on groceries or gas. Women in the survey said they spent $341 a year on cosmetics in 2016, up 2% from the year before and the highest amount to date in NPD's survey. It comes at a time when beauty companies are facing increasing pressure to prove that their products are safe — sometimes even to the point of ridding them of ingredients whose toxicity had not been previously well-documented.
