(from an announcement of a slightly altered version of the game) This game is the continuation of the original online RPG game "The Tarnished Prince", which was released three years ago. The original game was a 3-dimensional online RPG game where users could not only battle against each other, but also earn some money in the process. As a result of raising funds with the original game, the number of users has increased and we plan to offer a more varied and fun game experience to users. Features: - An epic 3D battle system - A unique JRPG-style action battle system - A 3D world with various locations - Over a hundred story arcs that take place in the Lands Between - Customization of the character's appearance and occupation - A wide variety of original spells and items - Various dungeons with fantasy-like design - A variety of NPC characters1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a sintered alloy, in particular a high-temperature sintered alloy, and a manufacturing method thereof. 2. Description of the Related Art High-temperature sintered alloys are conventionally known as an alloy having higher thermal conductivity than pure Ni, but have low toughness, so that no sintered bodies with high toughness have been developed. Sintered bodies with high toughness are conventionally known as an alloy containing not less than 10 mass% of Ni, as disclosed in Japanese Examined Patent Publication No. Hei 3-44,600. This alloy, however, is not appropriate for a high-temperature sintered alloy because it has low thermal conductivity. The alloy disclosed in Japanese Examined Patent Publication No. Hei 7-54,532 can provide a sintered body with high toughness, but it is unsuitable for a high-temperature sintered alloy. The reason is that the alloy is as such not sufficiently low in softening point at high temperature. In view of the above-described drawbacks, the object of the present invention is to provide a sintered alloy having high toughness and high thermal conductivity.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a re-shaping of non-oriented glass fibers in order to achieve an oriented shape, which can be applied particularly preferably to reinforcing tubular shaped articles, e.g., pipes, tubes, tubes or ducts. 2

Up to the present time there have been various attempts to improve the wetability of surfaces of various materials and to make them more resistant to water and steam. In view of the number of applications of ceramic and brickwork flooring (e.g., bathroom flooring) it is important that the covering materials have good water and steam wetability, in order that they can at least be scoured or brushed without special care. It has been customary for some time, in order to impart water and steam wetability to various materials or to improve the resistance to water, to incorporate in the material particles of a fluorine-containing resin or soap. There have also been many proposals in the art to provide ceramic tiles, stone slabs or the like with a protection layer. For this purpose, various methods have been used. In the U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,185,957 and 4,272,639 there are described surface coverings with a surface layer which consists of a cellulose, cellulose acetate or trialkanolamine ester and a water-soluble resin. The surface layer has been applied in mixtures with a fluorine-containing resin. The solubility of the resin used is partly determined by the corresponding hydrophilic colloid group. When the immersion of the surfaces is continued for a long time in water, the partially dissolved surface layer has to be renewed continuously. In the EP-B-0,074,734 there is described a ceramic tile which is provided with a cover layer consisting of cellulose acetate, an aqueous solution of a polyvinyl alcohol and an alkali metal salt or polyamine compound. The cover layer is applied by dipping a ceramic tile previously coated with a slip. The DE-AS No. 14 30 490 describes a process for the production of ceramic tiles which is characterized by the use of a composition containing polyvinyl alcohol and 2-hydroxy-2-alkyl-1,3-propanediol which can be scoured. The U.S. Pat. No. 3,670,246 describes a scouring composition containing a water soluble polymer such as polyvinyl alcohol, acrylamide copolymers, etc. and a dispersion of fine size materials such as kraft fibers or ground cellulose containing about 15% to about 25% of water, which scouring composition after application to a ceramic tile is scoured in an aqueous solution which contains an
