So the answer is: an IPv6 address can have any of the 88 or fewer addresses. But there are only 88 ranges of different sizes in IPv6. An IPv4 address has the whole address range. A: Because the number of IPv4 addresses is only the range 128 to 223 (as of today). This is due to a historic bias to limit the number of addresses. You can (and should) argue this is an archaic policy and we should move to a more equitable number but you have to keep in mind that a large number of IPv6 addresses will be valid for the whole future time period of the Internet. When you mix them in you get, for all intents and purposes, a random number of IPv4 addresses. 1978 North Carolina Tar Heels football team The 1978 North Carolina Tar Heels football team represented the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill during the 1978 NCAA Division I-A football season.
