Download Sherman Must Not Run Against DPH, Says La. Press
More than 150 editors, publishers and reporters from Louisiana gathered on April 12 in New Orleans to hear the first of two one-day meetings of the Louisiana Press Association on its proposed "no exclusivity" plan. Those who attended a meeting in New Orleans applauded the association's efforts, but also expressed their concerns to the group's chairman. DAVID J. FINKELMAN Jasper Lee At the start of the meeting, Southern Center for Human Rights President Carl Jensen called on Sherman Henderson to address the group.

He said Henderson had previously told him that the association's rule barring members from holding their own newspapers gave its members advantages that could potentially be used against unions. Henderson has said union members who work at a newspaper can be caught in a squeeze. If they do not join the union or leave their employment, the newspaper can drop their name, he noted. The issue of journalism "made this a lively election campaign in Baton Rouge, he said." Henderson went on to point out that one of the members who fought for exclusivity, Kansas City Star Managing Editor Ken Waylon, does not think exclusivity will work and that he doubts the newspaper "will be in any better shape" now that he has resigned. Waylon acknowledged that union members and management in other parts of the country have told him that they have similar problems, he said. "My hope is that Southern Center's lobbying efforts can persuade the U.S. Dakota Press Association to withdraw the Missouri request for exclusivity," Henderson told the audience. "I thank you for your support, and I thank Mr. Waylon for the work that he and the Southern Center has done." At the Louisiana Press Association meeting, Waylon said it is "ludicrous" to compare his situation to that of the newspapermen he had been working with in Missouri. "Nobody in Missouri ever asked me to run one of their papers," he said. Waylon said that his newspaper, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, has "run for exclusivity in 10 states" and its union is in a "good shape." Waylon and Lunden congratulated the association for having the courage to propose the policy. They also expressed their disappointment that Henderson had told the Southern Center that exclusivity would not work, given that Waylon said his paper

The project will combine in vitro and in vivo approaches to explore the molecular mechanisms underlying the initiation and progression of transcription through chromatin. Site-specific recombination and in vitro transcription assays will be employed to map the position and composition of nucleosome-associated sequences in the adenovirus 2 late transcription unit. A variety of techniques will be used to identify and isolate DNA-binding proteins important in transcription through chromatin. Nucleosome-displacing factor and in vitro transcription assays will be employed to determine the role of chromatin-associated factors and protein-protein interactions on transcription. Transcription from chromatin templates will be used as a model for the regulation of eukaryotic transcription at the chromatin level.Q: How can I get a list of dependencies (apache commons and other libraries) from a Maven project using M2Eclipse?
