ScreenNCopy Download Link ScreenNCopy Screenshot I think that I have discovered a small typo: "It is good to slow down to stay in control on the ice in the three-on-three sudden-death overtime. " Showing this in the end of "But slow is no longer slow when your star is great enough, like Jagr. And if you are a Czech like he is, you can get away with such an oversight." I am not really sure what you mean when you say, "slowing down", but I think "jagr" is a reference to "Jagr", the famous Czech player, but the thing is that the original sentence was not about him and did not even mention him. Moreover, I am sure that you are well aware of who he is, or am I wrong? A: What you are probably referring to is the fact that the Czech word for very slow is "zdržovat?", but the first part is pronounced as "zdržovat?" and "zdržovat?" sounds very similar to "zdržovat?" so people would be less likely to notice the error. The problem is that this is two words, so when it is in the middle of the sentence the whole sentence sounds similar to the whole of the first part of the sentence ("It is good to slow down to..."). You could fix this by rephrasing it "It is good to slow down to avoid being overtaken by the opponent in a three-on-three sudden-death overtime." Or you could even change the sentence to "But slow is no longer slow when your star is great enough, like Jagr. And if you are a Czech like he is, you can get away with such an oversight." Or you could change it to something like this "It is good to slow down if you want to avoid being overtaken by your opponent in a three-on-three sudden-death overtime." (This gives a slightly better description of what the writer was trying to say). GeeksToGo

ST: What's your job? What do you do? HS: I'm a writer. ST: Are you a novelist? HS: Oh, no, I'm not a novelist, but I like to think of myself as a mystery writer. I mainly write books for adults. ST: What type of books? Do you write mysteries, romantic love stories, thrillers? How do you decide which genre you'll write? HS: I write a lot of romantic love stories with a bit of a twist in the text and a lot of suspense. ST: That is a good combination to make your books popular. Do you write in any genre? HS: I mainly write thrillers – but most of my books are actually suspense. ST: How do you write the books? HS: The process is not really linear. Often it involves starting off by finding a world. For the last few novels, I was creating things that were just for my own personal reading pleasure. ST: Anything in particular? HS: Not really. I just let my mind wander. ST: Is that a valuable process? HS: Absolutely. I find it almost impossible to write during a specific period of time. I can't sit down and type. It's not even like I'm writing per se, it's more like a… an insight. I find writing is a very spiritual process, not like writing a novel. ST: I can relate to that. It's very much like meditation. HS: Yes. Writing is extremely liberating, because I can let the characters write the book for me. They can do anything they

A simple scoring system for classifying patients with different grades of gastrointestinal (GI) symptoms in respiratory disease is described. The aim is to develop an instrument which allows simple differential diagnosis and will aid epidemiological studies. The system was devised by the authors based on their experience and on international and national studies. The system was tested on a group of hospital in-patients with respiratory complaints and then applied to an outpatient population with gastroenterological symptoms. Forty-one such patients from a specialist respiratory outpatient clinic had scores for nausea, early satiety, upper abdominal pain, bloating, postprandial fullness and constipation, and abdominal pain. The presence of each symptom, its severity and the occurrence of autonomic manifestations of a GI disorder were scored. The scores for nausea and for bloating were found to be significantly associated with constipation (p Q: Using all the http verbs for each uri parameter in axios?
