Created by the Snes-Arena Company (a developer), Move It Up is a rhythm game with an abundance of challenging activities. It was designed to be a rhythm game in which players can "move it up" by stimulating their memory. There is no need to memorize the songs in this game. In fact, this is a game where you don't need to memorize. The only thing you need to remember is the rhythm and how to move your hands. It has a unique "Random Level Generator" feature, which allows you to escape from memorization mode, and it allows you to engage in a different music rhythm game experience. The game features music composed by Beni Arfaa and Adnan Attea. A two-player competitive mode with unique "battle " and "survival" modes is also included, in which players strive to better themselves and enjoy a better, more difficult "random level generator" experience. , Adventures + Adventures Menu North Deutschland In the heart of North Germany, a truly alien landscape; or more precisely, a landscape that has a huge gap between an archaeologist's openness towards myths and a traveller's boredom while waiting in line for visa. Nevertheless, I need to close these pre-printed pages. After a grueling winter in the Russian capital, I decided to leave Europe, but not before reminding myself of the ones who gave me the opportunity to take these stunning trails. I've arrived. The same day I was allocated with a complicated Swiss exit visa, Nick, a tour leader from Igloo, offered me to join his tour in North Germany. Nick promised me glory for a tour in a south to north direction. "All details are at your service." And I have a dozen of plans for additional days of travel, which left a gap between my hiking backpacking adventure and Schengen's strict rules. For 2,5 months I prepared this year long adventure. Not only I followed numerous creatories' plans, but I gathered some new rules, liaised with locals and updated some of the old ones. My objective for 2017 was to open my eyes by conscious ruins of Stone Age and get my morale back up after this long winter. 23 hours after arriving to Frankfurt airport I've flown in Lucerne's airport and got a sweet welcome from Nick. He was busy organising my German adventure all these years. The first day of hiking included the city tour, the Swiss border crossing, the mountain passes and the tour of the Berner Oberland. Facebook is flooded with images from this hike. I have adapted my photo in order to get the best result. Lots of mountain views, nature and make it clear – this is Germany. Nick and I thought in order to best keep you in the loop and to tell you what I've done, I have attached a series of photos, adventures and thoughts that were important to me for this trip. But let's start from the beginning... Hüttenberghaus, München, Germany | Photo: Nikita Lykhanov (CC BY-SA 2.0) The second day of hiking included München, Kempten and Gmunden. Nick recommended Gmunden because, as he said, �
