The creator of popular celebrity gossip site Perez Hilton slammed President Trump’s ongoing efforts to reform the H-2B visa program, claiming that they would result in workers losing out on jobs. Trump recently proposed altering the visa program for temporary foreign workers, arguing that the current program requires too much time and money, and results in H-2B workers competing for wages that are nearly one-third lower than the federal minimum wage. The H-2B visa is currently a popular vehicle for employers to legally import workers for temporary or part-time work in certain industries like hospitality, agriculture, landscaping, pest control, mining, and seasonal work. Further, the program includes a “guest worker” segment, where certain employers can hire temporary workers for what is described as “specialty occupation” work, which can include computer programming. There’s currently a shortage of workers for certain skills, with job applications for laid-off factory workers doubling in the last year alone. Trump’s proposal is seen by many as a way to bar some foreign workers from entering the country entirely. Critics claim it would result in displacement of low-wage American workers from jobs that are highly sought after. During a recent rally, Trump claimed that he is merely fighting for “American workers” and “Americans jobs.” Perez Hilton took to Twitter to blast Trump for “Pandering to a busload of illegal immigrant supporters and never Mentioning Hancock, N.Y. residents who have gotten 20 FREE SLEEPS over the past 2 decades (“FREE”). They’re good friends of mine and I even buried my grandma in the backyard.” The founder of PerezHilton, who appears to have lived in East Queens ever since the borough was created in 1902, actually has four children, but the entire family was forced to leave their homes when Hurricane Sandy was set to hit back in 2012. “My four sons and two daughters were housed and fed while my wife and I washed panes of glass to keep from breaking it (wind-water) and finally escaping with 13 family members.
