“Before EA was a games company, it was a sports company and the way we’ve always approached football is ‘Does the player really make the sport?’ And the answer is yes,” says FIFA game director Matt Eastwood. “Now the player can be the star. What the player does, the player is the star. When you look at the way sports are delivering the most immersive experiences, it starts with the player – so the team becomes the star and the player becomes the star.”

“We’ve taken on board the criticisms. We’ve taken on board the things that work, and we’ve gone back to the game development roots. This is something we’ve been wanting to do for a long time. We’ve worked really hard on it with a lot of innovation, and I think we’ve done a pretty good job. There are lots of tweaks and refinements to things like the AI, the graphics, the animations – making the whole gameplay experience just plain better.” “If you look at the things that are being reported as underperforming, it’s really gameable,” Eastwood continues. “I’ve seen things where players just start running in a certain direction – and the AI is going to run in that direction. So there’s a simple mechanic that the player can use to avoid a tackle, for example. If the player can react to that, he’ll jump out of that tackle. But if the player can be warned about that and get out of that tackle, then the AI stops running in that direction.” “I’ve seen a lot of criticism about the game being boring,” he concludes. “People like to pick on the game, because they’re thinking, ‘This is just a football game. What do I need to do to enjoy it?’ But what they’re failing to see is that the game’s all about how you get good, not about how you win.”Q: Divide a string by 50? I'm confused by this and if someone could help that would be amazing: I have a simple HTML string as such: $string = "abcdefghijklmnpqrstuvwxy0123
