Also, you could see that some of the 5.2.2 factory images are 3.5.0 and you can have a phone on 5.2.2 without a sim problem (Mostly for that we should keep 5.2.2 for a while). Meanwhile, Samsung is in charge of supporting the new feature in the replacement of the S6. A: I was in the same situation when I got my second-hand S6. The sim was not pre-registered on the mobile network, and I didn't have the credit to activate it. This happened due to the local operator, as they had recently switched the sim card register from e-SIM to NFC. So, there are two solutions: -Purchase a voucher that you may use to activate the sim. They usually sell for around $15. -Look for a replacement sim. There should be a replacement package to choose from. It's usually around $15. Be sure to look on the inside of the package so that you may find a sticker to read. Hope it helps. Regards Search Due to the new

Metabolism of d- and l- threo-dihydrosphingosine in L6 and PC12 cells. The cellular metabolism of d- and l-threo-dihydrosphingosine was compared in L6 myoblasts and rat pheochromocytoma PC12 cells. Both d- and l-threo-DHS were rapidly phosphorylated to d- and l-threo-sphinganine by a cytosolic, particulate fraction isolated from these cells. The phosphates were then metabolized to sphingoid bases via acylation. L6 cells catabolized d-threo-DHS more rapidly than dthreo-sphinganine. Similarly, the rate of d-threo-sphinganine accumulation was greater than that of d-threo-DHS in PC12 cells. Hence, the cellular catabolism of dthreo-DHS was faster than that of d-threo-sphinganine. In contrast, the accumulation of d-threo-DHS was more rapid than that of d-threo-sphinganine in L6 cells. These results suggest that d-threo-sphinganine is metabolized
