It was recorded in late 1997, and mixes ideas from the EP The Unspoken in its lyrics, as well as its occasional use of clean singing and grunge sound effects. The album was released on CD on 17 August 1997, and a vinyl version was released in the United Kingdom on 27 August, a day before the CD was released. The release of the fifth song for the X-Men was preceded by a digital release of the song's B-Side, "Out of Control", a song written by guitarist Thayil. Accompanied by a psychedelic art style, the track depicts a dark and enigmatic depiction of the band. It includes a melody that begins in an atonal/jazzy/whistle-influenced style, before joining back into the main melody, with some prominent piano and a melancholy melody pattern. It has been featured in promotional videos for Steven Spielberg's Saving Private Ryan, Ghost Rider and The Seven
