The present invention relates to an automatic transmission, and more particularly to a dual-clutch transmission that is suitable for use in a vehicle such as an automobile. An automatic transmission includes a plurality of gear trains, such as a gear train for a speed change ratio and a gear train for a reverse ratio, and planetary gears, such as a sun gear, a carrier, and a ring gear, that engage these gear trains, thereby realizing a plurality of shift ratios between a current gear position and a required gear position (a next gear position), or a plurality of forward drive speeds or speeds for running in a forward direction, depending on the number of forward speed stages. When a shift operation is performed, in a conventional automatic transmission, a hydraulic control system automatically controls oil pressure supplied to friction engagement elements. In the friction engagement elements, rotation is supported by oil pressure and, when the oil pressure is reduced due to shortage of oil or the like, the rotation is rapidly reduced by a drag torque. When the oil pressure is adjusted or increased to support a torque, the rotation is increased by an oil pressure acting as a spring force. These friction engagement elements function to regulate the torque transmission path through positive and negative coupling (cooperation). However, in the case of an automatic transmission having a plurality of rotary members and provided with a plurality of elements, the rotation conditions of the rotary members are not clear. The backlash varies depending on the mounting conditions of each rotary member. When the back play changes, a feeling is varied. In the conventional automatic transmission, in order to reduce the control characteristic of the automatic transmission, a shift control method in which the rotational
