Sonar X3 Producer isÂ .Q: How to create dynamic login form in angular and web2py I have created a Angular.js web application and want to create login and register form in Angular.js. I could generate all the form input elements using web2py's form.table() function. But there are certain conditions where I have to create all inputs dynamically and update the form object. These inputs are used to perform validation based on the user input. How do I achieve this? Is there a common way to do this? A: You could use ng-include for dynamically loading the template of the form. and in login.html: Username Password Submit Then you'd be able to submit the form with one of many submit handlers. function onSubmit() { $http.post("/app/controllers/login.py", $.param(username, password)); }
