Ticket32.Type IV deiodinase: a physiologic hormone. The physiologic feedback mechanisms that control plasma thyroid hormone concentration are multiple, complex, and contradictory, and only now, with the discovery of a new member of the type III and type IV deiodinases, are the mechanisms beginning to be understood. The type III deiodinase in vitro causes thyroxine to be converted to triiodothyronine and inactivation of T(4) to rT(3) in excess of its availability. Similarly, the type IV deiodinase and thyroid peroxidase in vitro mediate the inactivation of T(4) to rT(3) by reducing T(4) to T(3) and converting it to rT(3). The physiologic significance of the deiodinases is not yet known. This inability to control thyroid hormone concentration in plasma by a single mechanism may be of clinical significance because of the potentially deleterious consequences of plasma T(4) elevation.Q: What is the standard way to configure the spring-amqp when using the spring-boot version? I am using spring-boot version that I am sure is superior to 1.4. So if I am using Spring-amqp I have to specify the properties right? @Configuration @EnableAutoConfiguration(exclude = { RabbitAutoConfiguration.class}) @Import(RabbitAutoConfiguration.class) public class MyApplication extends SpringBootServletInitializer { @Override protected SpringApplicationBuilder configure
