bantamweight champion Amanda Nunes believes she was chosen to represent the UFC in the Rio Olympics. Nunes defeated Ronda Rousey for the inaugural UFC women's bantamweight championship in August. Prior to Rousey's loss to Nunes, she served as the lead actor in promotional videos for the organization. With the UFC's viewership continuing to grow in Brazil, the UFC's Brazilian president, Paulo Zalucca, said he believes Nunes was given the role because she will create the most interest among fans. "We have a reality show and, in a hypothetical scenario, we had a champion playing a role, then they couldn't have Amanda play that role because it would have meant she would be on TV 24/7," Zalucca said (via MMAjunkie). "On the other hand, someone like Liz Carmouche would have been the perfect choice. She is already a familiar face. Amanda is the new face of the UFC. You can take that as a compliment to me, but we both know that Amanda is the face." "You know how it is when you see a beautiful girl, c6a93da74d
