Field of the Invention This invention relates to offshore drilling and production operations, and more particularly to a method for substantially interrupting the flow of formation fluids to or from a subsurface hydrocarbon reservoir during the drilling of a well bore through or near the reservoir. 2. Description of Related Art Oil and gas are produced from the earth's subterranean formations by various procedures. For instance, drilling is performed to create one or more wellbores to extend from the surface to the source formations. Depending on the depth and complexity of the subterranean formations and hydrocarbon content, the wellbore may extend thousands of feet below the surface. Typically, the wellbore or a portion thereof is lined with a tubular member to provide a conduit for one or more tubular members, and to permit circulation of fluids during the drilling and completion operations. Wellbore tubulars may be fabricated in sections, typically called "joints," c6a93da74d
